LAWYER HELD A PRISONER?

MRS. WEBB SAYS HER HUSBAND WAS KEPT IN A FACTORY.

He's a Drug Flend, She Declares, and Was Detained by Fruehier for a Month -Charged Abandonment and Cop Had Considerable Trouble to Free Him.

Mrs. Ernest C. Webb, wife of a patent lawyer living at 250 Warwick street, Brooklyn, declared in the Gates avenue police court yesterday that her husband had been detained against his will in the fur finishing factory of Julius Froehler, at 722 Eleventh street, Manhattan, for more than a month. Mrs. Webb said that her husband is a drug fiend and that Froehler gave him cocaine and whiskey while he was there. The manufacturer denied the charge and said the lawyer had been at liberty to go home at any time.

Webb disappeared from home nearly a month ago and two weeks later, his wife found him in Froehler's factory. The lawyer told his wife then that he was preparing a case for Froehler and would not return home until he had finished the work. Mrs. Webb made a number of other visits to the factory, but was always unsuccessful in her efforts to get her husband away. Finally she swore to a complaint of abandonment and Magistrate Naumer of Brooklyn detailed Court Officer James Gibbons to produce the lawyer in the Gates avenue police court. When arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Higgiobosham the lawyer pleaded guilty and was field in $300 bail for further examination to-day.

According to Mrs. Webb her husband lost $100,000 in Wall Street and then began to use cocaine for neuralgia until he became addicted to the drug. He was under its effect, she says, when, at Froehler's request, he went to the factory to prepare the legal papers in a case of infringement of a patent. Mrs. Webb declares that when she saw her bushand in the factory he was in a half-dazed condition.

Court Officer Gibbons said that when he visited the factory Froehler informed him that the lawyer was not there. The last visit to the place by Gibbons was on Wednes-day afternoor, when Mrs. Webb was with Gibbons savs they en countered ugly looking buildog, but he did not do more than growl at them. Gibbons went to the engine room where he found the

*There was a big Englishman named Charles Goodyear in the factory with Henry Froehler and I was treated with some arrogance," said Gibbons. "They resented my intrusion, but I got Webb to wash himself and put on his coat and hat and then hurried him away. He said in the Liberty avenue station that he had had whiskey and avenue station that he had had whiskey and some drug regularly while in the factory."

"It is possible that Mr. Froehler was actuated by good motives in letting my husband have whiskey and drugs," said Mrs. Webb. "My husband was addicted to the cocaine habit and Mr. Froehler was a superfective to the cocaine habit and Mr. Froehler was might have been trying to break him of it. He was one of my husband's clients and a friend of the family The detention talk is all nonsense," said "I had no reason for keeping Mr. Webb from his wife and child. I wrote
